Offense / Incident Narrative

On 01/23/2012 at approximately 0810 hours, I was dispatched to the TSA Central Checkpoint on a passenger being irate. Upon arrival, units were advised that the passenger refused to be patted down after he alarmed during screening. The passenger was identified as Randal H. Paul, United States Senator from Kentucky. Transportation Security Administration (TSA) supervisors advised us the passenger did not want to be patted down, but requested to go back through screening. TSA requires if a passenger alarms during screening they have to be patted down for unknown items about their person. Senator Paul was seated in a glass cubicle just forward of the screening lanes on the secured side. He was being monitored during this time by TSA while they were trying to explain their procedures to him. Senator Paul wanted to speak with the management of TSA concerning their screening procedures and how it affects the passengers perception of wanting to be screened. Senator Paul advised TSA, he was going to make a phone call and he was allowed to, but he continued to be monitored by TSA. Airport Police Officers maintained a presence in the area, allowing TSA to contact management, while Senator Paul made several phone calls to unknown contacts. I spoke with Senator Paul and advised him that TSA stated, if he would not allow them to complete the screening process according to their procedures, he would need to leave the screening checkpoint area. I informed Senator Paul, I would walk him to the unsecured area of the terminal building. Senator Paul said to me on the way out, that TSA was just embarrassed from the incident. Senator Paul departed the secured area with no further involvement.
